

TRICK OR TREAT

Assembling this collection of Kim & Jason Weekend comic strips which were originally published between October 14, 2001 and October 29, 2006 served to remind me just how much I loved incorporating the theme of Halloween. It's a holiday that screams (pardon the pun) childhood. Between the outrageous ghouls and the piles of colorful candy, my imagination can't help but shift into overdrive.

I'm also satisfied by how I seemed to get better at the craft. The characters, the linework and the color schemes all improved and became much more sophisticated. I typically look back at old work in horror, but there actually are a few here that I really quite like.

I hope you'll enjoy the look back, and that the comics will inspire you to open up the front door of your soul to welcome in that childlike spirit of yours (the one wearing a homemade costume and carrying a bucket full of candy!)

He seems to like the face you gave him, Boompa!

I just think he's happy to have all that goop out.

People won't even know what I'm supposed to be.

Of course they will—you're a ghost, right Stinky?

And one with a fashion sense to die for.
